Registration of Will Co., Voters Begun

Registration of voters in the 87 precincts of Will County, as required before the general election November 8, was begun at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning of this week by the three election judges in each precinct.

Despite the fact that all voters must either register their vote before the night of November 1, the last day for registration, or swear in their vote on election day, no rush of voters to the precincts was reported.

The judges of election themselves place the names of all known voters of their precinct on the registration book, the primary poll book assisting them in their work. The registration book is then posted in the precinct polling place to remain for a week or ten days, at the end of which time it is taken down and checked over by the judges.

Voters are privileged to look at the book and to write their names in if they have not been set down by the judges. Their next opportunity to register comes one week before the

BLUE ISLAND JUDGE HELD UP ON ROUTE 51

Three gunmen riding in an automobile, held up L. J. Steffel, Blue Island police court judge, and his companion John Rodhe, also of Blue Island Tuesday night. The victims were riding in the judge's car on Route 51 where the road goes into Cook county.

Drawing up beside the judge's automobile in their car the gunmen thrust a rifle barrel out of the window and crowded the machine of their victims into a ditch. They took $71 and the shoes and overcoats of Judge Steffel and Rodhe.

Leaving the two men standing beside their wrecked car, the bandits climbed back into their own automobile and headed back into Will Co.

On route 22 near the Wolf south of Mokena, they encountered Kenneth Stockey, Markle, Indiana who was riding alone in his car toward Joliet.

The gunmen forced Stockey to halt and after taking $150 in cash, three suits of clothes, his hat and watch, they decided to exchange cars with him. They drove away in Stockey's Nash sedan, bearing Indiana license number 445-673 and left a Plymouth sport coupe Illinois license 449-956.

The bandits decided to leave Will County and head for Chicago so on their way back they went over route 51. They again passed Judge Steffel and Rodhe, who were debating how they could get home without shoes and without an automobile in working order. The gunmen aimed the rifle at the men as they passed. Judge Steffel and Rodhe beat a retreat into a cornfield by the side of the road.

Both robberies were later reported at the Will County sheriff's office in Joliet after passing motorists had come to the aid of all three victims. The coupe abandoned by the bandits bore a license issued to Mary E. Thurstau, 334 West 16th street, Chicago. Sheriff's deputies believe the car was stolen.

As described by the three men who were robbed, the bandits were led by a youth about five feet, nine inches tall, weighing 120 pounds and dressed in gray coat, trousers and hat. One of his companions was five feet, six inches tall, weighed about 160 pounds and wore gray trousers, sweater and hat. The third bandit remained in the car during both hold-ups and could not be described by the victims.

It is my intention to vigorously defend the court suit now pending against me; as legal guardian of my four sons I shall prosecute any one who by innocent purchase or otherwise destroys the value of their estate.

BEAUTIFYING OF MOKENA SCHOOL GROUNDS VERY LAUDATORY PROJECT

Have you been to the Mokena school grounds lately? If not, you may be surprised to see the landscaping project, not yet completed; that will be eventually, a place of beauty and of civic pride.

The committee of the Garden Club, Parent Teachers Association and the School Board are: Ona E. McGovney, Chairman; Mrs. Albert Braun, Mrs. Mabel Mall, Mrs. E. P. Krapp, and Mrs. Ralph Coler. They have laid out a portion of the grounds for filling and planting with trees and shrubbery and if you, who have not seen the work thus far done, are half as pleased, when you do see it, as are the Committee, we feel you will take just pride in it.

The Committee has had the fine cooperation of Cappel Bros., Harry F. Mall, Martin Muehler and Cooper & Hostert by the donation of the use of their trucks on at least three days; of Julius Oswald who donated about 10 loads of dirt; of Emil D. Cappel, who located and helped get out the dirt; of Earnest Lehnert for plowing, discing and dragging; of Fred E. Yunker for a bargain price for peat bought of him; of The News-Bulletin for giving publicity to the project; to Mrs. Ralph Coler, Mrs. F. A. Tooley, Mrs. W. H. Bechstein and to The Garden Club for their generous contribution of shrubbery; and to Mr. and Mrs. William Lowe for cash for lawn seed. The Committee wishes to thank, very heartily, every one who helped in any way in this meritorious work. The project is not yet quite completed, and the Committee are rather reluctant to ask any of the truck owners or any who labored without compensation, for their further contributions.

An estimated 12 or 15 truck loads of earth will be required to finish what is started.

Anyone, who will donate the use of their truck for hauling next Saturday, or who will work, please advise any of the Committee; or report at the school house, Saturday at 8:00 A. M.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE days were growing shorter and the nights cooler. The leaves of the Green Forest, except those on the pine and the spruce and the hemlock trees, were turning red and yellow and brown and dropping to carpet the ground and rustle beneath unwary feet. As often as possible Peter Rabbit slipped over to the pond of Paddy the Beaver to see if Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the ten young Quacks were still there, and each time he found them growing more and more uneasy. He knew that it would take very little to start them on their long journey to spend the coming winter in the far away Southland—the sight of other quite out of breath, he reached the edge of the pond of Paddy the Beaver. He was greatly relieved to see all the Quack family still there.

"Oh," he panted. "I'm just in time." "Just in time for what?" asked Mr. Quack.

"To warn you that it isn't safe for you to go to the Big River tonight," cried Peter. "I saw a hunter with a terrible gun going that way this afternoon and he may be there yet."

If Peter expected that his news would excite the Quack family, he was mistaken, very much mistaken. In fact, it wasn't news at all. "We saw a hunter over there last night, and so we knew that the time has come for us to go," explained Mr. Quack. "We're ever so much obliged to you, Peter, for trying to warn us, and we're glad you've come in time to say good-by. Perhaps we'll see you again next spring. Take care of yourself and don't let Reddy Fox catch you." "Good-by and good luck," cried Peter and Paddy the Beaver together.

Mr. Quack swam out to the head of his flock. Very faintly from far away there came the bang of a gun. As if this was a signal, Mr. Quack shot into ducks flying overhead or a sudden fright.

Just at dusk every evening they flew over to the Big River to feed among the rushes there, Mr. Quack leading. His wing, which had been broken by shot from a terrible gun in the spring, was as sound and strong as ever. In fact, Mr. Quack was quite himself, big, strong and handsome. As for the young Quacks, they were full grown now and eager to try their wings in long flights and to see the Great World. Very early every morning they returned to the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest to spend the day resting, sleeping and perhaps playing a little. At least, the young Quacks played.

One afternoon Peter slipped away from the dear Old Brier Patch over to the Green Forest and hurried straight to the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Peter had something on his mind. Just by chance he had peeped out of the dear Old Brier Patch in time to see a man passing, and under one arm he carried a terrible gun. There was no doubt about that. Peter knows a terrible gun when he sees it. He watched the man out of sight and he disappeared in the direction of the Big River. Right away Peter thought of the Quack family. Just supposing that hunter should be hiding near where the Quacks usually ate their evening meal! Peter shivered a little at the thought of what might happen. Mr. and Mrs. Quack ought to be warned and there was no one to do it but himself.

Peter started early enough, but as is his way he had to stop ever so many times to look at things which aroused his curiosity. When he had satisfied it he would scamper lipperty-lipperty-lip as fast as he could until something else stopped him. So it was almost the Quack dinner time when at last,

HOW TO COOK RABBIT

THERE are few people who do not like the gamey flavor of wild things. However, the following recipes may be used for the tame rabbit as well. For those fortunate enough to have several rabbits on hand and who wish to keep them for later use, the following is a good recipe:

Pickled Rabbit.

Prepare the rabbit as for roasting. Place in a stone crock or jar and cover with one pint each of vinegar and water, one onion (into which stick three cloves), two bayleaves, half dozen allspice, one dozen pepper corns, one dozen chili peppers cut into halves. Let the rabbit remain in this liquid for three days, turning it occasionally. Drain and stew it, or braise it. To braise it cut one-eighth pound of salt pork into slices to cover the bottom of the baking pan. Place sliced onion, carrot and turnip and celery over the pork. Lay the meat on this and dredge with seasoned flour. Cover and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Pour one pint of stock over the meat, dredge again with flour, salt and pepper. Cook very slowly closely covered for two hours or longer. During the last half hour cook uncovered to brown the meat. Serve on a hot platter. Strain a portion of the gravy over the rabbit and the rest, serve in a gravy boat. Keep the pan from the bottom of the oven with a grate or ring all during the cooking.

Belgian Hare.

Clean and split a hare, season with salt and pepper and lard with strips of fat salt pork across the back and the legs. Place in a baking pan with a small amount of brown stock and carrot, onion and celery cooked in a little fat. Baste the hare often with the stock in the pan and bake forty-five minutes. Add one cupful of cream, the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of cornstarch made smooth with cold water. Baste and cook twenty minutes longer, then serve the sauce, strained.

the air, and behind him rose all the other Quacks. There was a shrill sound of whistling wings, which grew fainter and fainter until it could no longer be heard. High in the air twelve black specks grew smaller and smaller and then disappeared. Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their ten children had started on their long, terrible journey to the faraway Southland.

Peter felt a lump in his throat. "I do hope nothing will happen to them," he said in a husky voice.

"If it were not for the hunters with terrible guns, nothing would, for Mr. Quack is smart enough to keep them from all other dangers and he has brought his children up to mind. They're as well trained a lot of young ducks as ever I've seen, and I've seen a great many," replied Paddy. "But I dread those terrible guns," he added. (© 1932, by T. W. Burgess.)—WNU Service.

I WILL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FEW things are done because we can.

Or not because we can't.

To will is something greater than

To wish, to only want.

We do not lose because the day

Was dark, or high the hill;

We do not win because we may,

We win because we will.

Men lose who might have won success,

Who "couldn't," yet they could.

Men win who nothing more possess

Than hope and hardihood.

Because they can't men do not lose,

Because they can, achieve;

The winners win because they choose,

And nothing else believe.

Who thinks that he can fail has failed

Before he makes a start,

But "can't" has never yet prevailed

Against a dauntless heart.

The man who "can" may be too sure,

Who "can't" is weaker still;

But no misfortune can endure

Before the man who "will."

BLAME SUN SPOTS FOR "HARD TIMES"

If the sun didn't put us on the spot, then it put its spots on us. In other words, the sun's spots caused the depression (hard times have been blamed on almost everything else, so why not on the sun?). A study of sun spots made by the Dominion Observatory of the department of interior at Ottawa, Can., is reported to have indicated that profound fluctuations in living conditions and life in general accompany fluctuations in these heavenly or solar phenomena. A recent bulletin from that department points out that individual sun spots vary greatly in size, some being as small as the earth while others are five or six times as large. Complete records of sun spots kept by certain countries since 1750 show that each month can be assigned a relative sun spot number. From these monthly numbers a yearly average is figured. The yearly numbers are said to increase from a minimum to a maximum in from nine to fourteen years with an average duration for a cycle of about eleven years. This fluctuation is commonly called the eleven year sun-spot cycle. These cycles are accompanied on the earth by fluctuations in the amount of sunlight received, precipitation, cloudiness, temperature, chemical composition of the atmosphere, electro-magnetic conditions, etc., all physical elements which control living conditions for all forms of life.—Pathfinder Magazine.

More Wheat Land in Ireland

Half a million acres more of wheat land in Ireland have been put under the plow than last year as a result of the new wheat quota. This was declared by Sir Boyd Merriman, solicitor general, at a Unionist fete at Fort Castle, near Berwick. He said that the remarkable recovery of the country in the last year and the great war loan conversion scheme showed that the country was not down and out. He believed that the wheat quota would end in farmers selling wheat at less than the cost of production.

Devastation by Lemmings

The Norwegian lemmings, small creatures of the mouse tribe that live in the mountainous districts of the Scandinavian countries, are noted for the strange migrations they make at certain intervals. At these times they travel in great masses from the center of Norway to the east and west, leaving desolation in their wake. When they reach the coast they fling themselves into the sea to die. Some are always left behind, however, to propagate their race, but this does not need to be a large number, as they breed very rapidly.

"Did you learn who paid him?" Shad asked.

"Yes. The name I am not quite ready to disclose. You and I must go tomorrow and make a careful survey of the premises of Robert Royce. Within twenty-four hours I think that we shall have our man in jail. Meanwhile we must keep still and step softly."

"I have some news for you," Shad began. "We are at the end of the mystery."

Shad told of the doctor's strategy with the unfortunate girl and of the taking of the photograph, with the help of magnesium and powder, at night. He recited the dialogue that he had overheard. He presented the sealed envelope to his friend, saying: "There is the photograph. I have not seen it. The doctor says that it shows the murderer. He is sure of that."

Colonel Blake broke the seal of the envelope and looked at the photograph. "G—d!" he exclaimed as he put it back in the envelope.

He walked up and down thoughtfully, a serious look in his face. He resumed his seat.

"This is important," he said. "The talk you overheard and the photograph are the last links in the chain. It's a remarkable story, and there's a great hero in it."

The boy restrained his curiosity in the moment of silence that followed. It was broken by the colonel who said:

"My boy, in this whole matter you have rendered me a great service. It has been the work of a man and a brave man at heart. My rule is to keep decisive evidence to myself until the one it affects is under arrest, but I think that you are entitled to see that photograph if you wish to."

"How to your judgment, sir. I can wait."

"Well, you will not have long to wait. How did you get on with Blackstone?"

Shad took from his pocket the little essay that he had written on The Foundation of the Common Law. The colonel read it carefully.

"Again you have surprised me," he said. "It is excellent. I don't mean to say that it is above criticism, but your ideas are well expressed and your judgment of the value of the factors is singularly mature. It is like that of a man."

Shad was quick to take his cue. He said, "Colonel Blake, this compliment is very welcome. You told me once that I was brave. Well, I am going to be braver now than I have ever been."

The colonel turned toward the boy, whose face was red with embarrassment. He asked:

"Shad, what is it?"

"I am in love with your daughter. Some time I want to marry her if she will have me. I want to ask her to wait for me until I am old enough. If I have done anything worth doing, it is because I loved her and wanted to win her admiration."

The colonel laughed. "My boy, I know how you feel," he said. "It's a terribly serious feeling. I can only say now that the court reserves its decision. At present let us confine our thought to the main issue. I am weary with much travel and must have rest. I'll go to bed and you go to your lodgings. Tomorrow will be a busy day for both of us. I shall get a good team in the morning and call for you at eight o'clock."

Next morning Shad drove to Ashfield with Colonel Blake and the sheriff. They stabled their horses. The colonel asked Shad to telephone to Doctor Gorse and learn if he had any news to report.

The doctor answered: "Tell your chief that I must see him this morning, and that I will meet him at the Westminster hotel within the hour."

They waited in the hotel office until the doctor arrived.

Then the colonel, the sheriff and the boy proceeded to the shop of Robert Royce. The colonel addressed him in a serious tone.

"Royce, the time has come when I must have a frank talk with you," he said. "You will save yourself embarrassment if you lock your door and draw the shades. There can be no interruption of these proceedings."

Royce changed color. In a frightened voice he inquired, "What has happened?"

"I may have to arrest you. I have evidence enough to make you a lot of trouble. If you lie to me you shall suffer for it. What I want from you is the truth and the whole truth. I warn you not to conceal any part of it. Don't make a mistake and try to fool me. It won't work."

"What have I done?" Royce asked. "That's exactly what I want to know," Blake answered. "You are in a critical position. I take it that you do not want to be tried for murder or for complicity in murder."

"Murder!" Royce exclaimed. "Yes. You cannot prove an alibi. Moreover you had a motive as the only heir of your mother. You were intimate with the crook Algyre who has made a confession of his part in the killing of Oscar Perry and the attempt to put it on Bumpy Brown."

Royce had risen to his feet with a distressful countenance.

"My G—d, sir!" he exclaimed. "I have been a fool but I had nothing to do with that crime. What can I tell you?"

Blake demanded: "Tell me all that you know about the girl Carrie Brown." "That's like prodding me with a hot iron," he began. "But I'll tell you. Everything I know I'll tell you. She is a daughter of old Bumpy Brown. She came on to live with her father nearly two years ago. I was a friend of the old man. He lived in town and was drinking hard those days. She couldn't be happy with him and he was in no shape to take care of her. I fell in love with that girl."

Royce stopped. He leaned forward, his face in his hands. When he spoke again his voice showed signs of emotion.

"I never knew what it meant to be in love until I saw her," he went on. "My uncle gave her a job in his shop in Malone. The work was hard. She didn't like it. She was not very well. I got her a place in the store in South Bolton. It was a healthy country. She liked it. I went to see her once a week. I took her out riding."

"What Do I Know About the Murder of Oscar Perry?"

Royce paused again. Colonel Blake asked: "Were you engaged to her?"

"Well, I had asked her to marry me. She had not promised to do it. I began to see she did not care as much for me as I did for her. I would have gone through hell for her. By and by I learned that she was keeping company with another man. I couldn't find out who it was. I was told that she would walk off in the woods alone Sunday evenings and meet him. I am sure that she was fond of him. He didn't love her as much as I did—that's certain."

Royce took out his handkerchief and wiped his eyes.

"He seduced her," the young man went on. "By and by she was in trouble. I had quit going to see her. Hubbard wrote me the truth and said that something would have to be done. The girl had no friends. I went up there. I couldn't stay away. I felt sorry. I loved her in spite of all she had done. She wanted to go to a midwife up in the woods. She wanted to hide the disgrace as much as possible. I took her there. She had a baby and came near dying. I stood by her. I took Doctor Gorse up there to see her. He saved her life."

Colonel Blake arose and went to Royce's side and took his hand, saying: "You have told the truth like a man. You see, I know the truth, but I wanted to hear it from you. I have only one more question to ask. When you missed your revolver, cartridges and overalls, had you no suspicion of the thief?"

"Algyre was in the shop the day of the murder. He told me that while I was out on an errand that day Bumpy Brown came in and went back to the office. I made up my mind Bumpy had done the stealing."

Colonel Blake answered: "I am satisfied."

The sheriff was speaking of the admirable attitude of the young harness-maker toward the unfortunate girl when a loud rap shook the door. Immediately the rap was repeated.

"You may open the door and resume business," said Colonel Blake. "Pardon the interruption."

The door swung open revealing Cyrus Doolittle.

"Ask him to come in," said Blake. "He's just the man I want to see."

"I'm in a hurry," said Doolittle as he entered with a serious look in his face.

The colonel stepped behind him, closed the door, locked it and put the key in his pocket. He turned to the newcomer and said:

"Doolittle, if I were you I'd be in a hurry myself. I think that you've been in too much of a hurry all your life. The day has come when you must sit down and think it over."

Doolittle had turned pale. "I'm due in Griggsby in an hour," he said, looking at his watch. His dark eyes were troubled. He stroked his brown beard. "You are overdue at the county seat," Blake answered.

"What do you mean?" As if making a random remark about the weather the colonel answered:

"I mean that you are going to jail this morning for the murder of Oscar Perry."

There was a little convulsive movement in the figure of Doolittle. In a second his muscles tightened. He stood erect. A look of indignation, on a background of death-like pallor, masked his face.

"Me?" he demanded. "What do I know about the murder of Oscar Perry?"

Blake answered calmly: "Sit down, Doolittle. Don't try to make me believe that you've lost your memory. Why are you so excited? Pull yourself together and sit down and listen."

Doolittle slumped into a chair. He clasped his fingers around one knee and sat with his chin upon his breast, breathing deeply as he looked at Blake.

The colonel seemed to be touched with a sense of pity. He spoke in a gentle tone. "For years I have been your friend. I am still your friend. I know your story from beginning to end. I know every detail in it. I am not lying to you. I have the proofs in my possession. Some time ago you fell in love with a pretty girl. You made her believe that your wife could not live long. You gave her money and dressed her handsomely. She was young and unwise. You won her affection. You began to dally with passion. It is the most dangerous game which honest people can play. You lost your mental and moral balance. You staggered. The old Cyrus Doolittle fell dead. You had seduced the girl. You were soon between the devil and the deep sea. Your good judgment and your sense of honor had been burned out of you by the fire of lust. You wrote a lot of nonsense in the girl's autograph album. I have it here. You said among other things:

"This, dear Carrie, is from one who hopes soon to be yours."

The unhappy man interrupted his tormentor.

"It's a lie!" he exclaimed in a woe-filled voice like that of a victim on the rack. Beads of perspiration were on his brow.

"I do not wonder that you deny it," the colonel went on. "Surely those words were never written by my old friend, Cyrus Doolittle. He was a smart fellow. It was quite another man who committed that folly—a man blinded by his passion. He had resolved to possess himself of the girl as soon as possible. How was he to do it?"

Impossible to Acquire Real Ability to Spell?

It was a ruthless spelling bee that the Catholic Actors' guild held. According to all reports, the spellers who remained in the lineup towards the finish had to submit to heckling by the members already downed, and the announcer was severe with all attempts to get a word repeated. In the old-fashioned spelling bees it used to be all right to ask teacher to repeat while the speller thought furiously in the minute gained.

The rule in this one was elimination of the person making an error. In school you went to the foot of the class and tried to work your way back to the top, but it was a hopeless game for a naturally poor speller. At the end of the session there was a gloomy little group down at the foot, always composed of the same sad individuals.

How the good spellers manage it is a mystery to those who cannot. They can tackle and conquer a word of which they probably never heard through some special faculty—probably just a sense of spell.—New York Times.

Creator of Bell Music

It is due to a Cambridge (England) man named Fabrian Stedman that church bells make music instead of merely noise. He was the man who established the ringing of changes as an art, and the bell-ringers recognized the fact when they held a great bell-ringing festival to mark his tercentenary recently. Of course, there were bells before Stedman, and some very ancient ones are still in use. The oldest in Britain, a bell in the parish church of Lanark, dates back to 1110. It is probably the oldest bell in Europe.

There are 908 city and county parks in Illinois, totaling 23,352.4 acres, the National Recreation association has announced. Enforced leisure due to unemployment has raised adult attendance at parks the country over, the report points out. Cities of Illinois improve upon the record of cities nationally in meeting the standard for adequate park space set by the association—one acre of park for every 100 persons.

Idleness prevailing in many of the penal and reformatory institutions of the nation is one of the major causes of prison disturbances, Col. Frank D. Whipp, warden of the Joliet (Ill.) penitentiary, declared in a discussion of the prison labor problem at the congress of American Prison association at Indianapolis on October 4. He spoke on the question of providing work for men in prison.

This will include mayors of all important cities in Illinois, county superintendents of schools, heads of boards of supervisors, the presidents of park districts, newspaper editors and candidates for office.

The ballot this year, to be certified by the secretary of state, will be practically the same width as four years ago, but will be curtailed in length, because of a new law, which eliminates the names of the 29 Presidential electors. In their stead, the names of candidates for President and Vice President of the respective parties will be printed. In other words, a vote for the candidates direct is a vote for each of the electors nominated at the state conventions.

Registration for the fall term at the Urbana departments of the University of Illinois has reached 9,263. G. P. Tuttle, registrar, has announced. These figures indicate a drop of approximately 12 per cent in the enrollment a comparison with the same period a year ago when 10,525 students had enrolled at the end of the first week.

Most vital to the state as a whole of all cases eligible for a decision by the Illinois Supreme court during its October term is that regarding the constitutionality of the state income tax law. This law was passed during the first special session of the Fifty-seventh General assembly and was declared invalid by Judge Jesse R. Brown in Sangamon County Circuit court. The court also is again scheduled to decide the liability as former stockholders of defunct banks. It had earlier decided that all former stockholders and their estates were liable for the deposits made in their banks while they were connected with the institution.

Senate bill 28, introduced by Senator Harry G. Wright, authorizing receivers of closed state banks to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance corporation to speed up payment to depositors, has passed both branches of the general assembly and been signed by the governor. The act is to be submitted to referendum at the next general election.

Self-Improvement

Every real and searching effort of self-improvement is of itself a lesson of profound humility.

Thirty-five blind men and women have been employed during the past few weeks as telephone switchboard operators in state institutions, it has been revealed. Their employment, officials state, is part of a plan to train graduates of the vocational school for the blind at Jacksonville to earn a living. Specially prepared switchboards are used. Ten blind stenographers have also been trained for state employment.

Farmers armed with defensive methods offered by the state college of agriculture and the Illinois natural history survey have been making ready to destroy the chinch bugs which have been establishing themselves in thousands of miles of Illinois fence rows and hedges and in heavy grass areas. They will spend the winter there and be ready to destroy crops next spring. Chinch bugs, it is said, are nearly as destructive to corn crops as grasshoppers.

The state of Illinois will be ready for the opening of the Illinois waterway on November 15, if the federal government should complete its work by that time, Henry H. Kohn, director of the state department of purchases and construction has announced. While all of the bridges to be built by the state have not been completed, Mr. Kohn stated, the construction of those yet to be erected will be so arranged as not to interfere with barge traffic.

New Wonder of Science

"As fine as a hair" once served to indicate the last word in the extreme of thinness. But today electricity has brought into existence diameters which make the thickness of a hair seem, in comparison, like a heavy manila rope. For instance, in one type of electric lamp the wire filament is one-fifth of the diameter of a human hair. This filament wire is used in special lamps for sickrooms; to illuminate house numbers, the interior of electric refrigerators and the like.

Trees That "Migrated"

Millions of Years Ago

If you want to see what the forests of California and Oregon looked like millions of years ago, just take a trip to South America. There, on the slopes of the Venezuelan Andes, you may see living trees that closely resemble species once native to the western coast of North America, a Carnegie Institute of Washington expedition to this South American region has revealed. This discovery, made by Prof. Ralph W. Chaney of the University of California and Dr. Erling Dorf of Princeton university, was based on a comparison of the foliage of the South American trees with leaf prints of the ancient west coast trees that are found as fossils in the rocks of today. It upholds the theory that the forests that once existed in North America were pushed south as the climate became increasingly cold and dry.—Detroit Free Press.

The Ladies Aid of St. John's church held their meeting in the parlors of the church Thursday afternoon. The meeting was largely attended, about 185 persons being present.

The meeting was the result of a contest of the Red and Blue sides, consisting of members born in the first part of the year and those born in the last part of the year. The Red side won by a small margin of one, the score being 46 to 45.

There were 44 visitors of the Blue side and 23 visitors of the Red side. The oldest visitor was presented with a basket of fruit, consisting of strawberries and pears. The one bringing in the most visitors received a very beautiful decorated cake.

Plants were awarded to the leaders of the winning side. A very elaborate luncheon was served, the tables being decorated with prettily arranged dishes and flowers. The whole affair was enjoyed by all.

Leesman who has served this church for 13 years, making just two pastors in this church in the past 50 years. The present organist has served in that capacity for 32 years. Rev. Stammer during his active ministerial work founded seven churches in Chicago.

It Is Folly

To Change now

The following gives an outline of the thought that is current among the editors of Republican newspapers in Illinois in regards to the election on November 8th:

If there is any cause for this depression on which we can lay our finger, it is, so far as the whole world is concerned, the customary sequel of any great war. But so far as our own country is concerned it is more than anything else due to the billions of our own money loaned by the Wilson administration to foreign nations, which we are thus far unable to collect.

That we are still as well off as we are in this country is due to the ability, common sense, unparalleled sincerity of purpose and intelligence of President Hoover, with which he has faced his herculean tasks. President Hoover has stood and is now standing alone, even as Abraham Lincoln stood alone, fighting for the solution of a gigantic and heretofore unheard of economic problem.

Hoover, like Lincoln, has been harrassed, harried, heckled by peanut politicians and congress, or he would have had the depression solved ere this.

If a Democratic congress, in times of peace, had given one-half the assistance that a Republican congress gave in time of war, our economic position today would have been different than it is.

It would be folly for the American people to deprive themselves of a leadership as intelligent and honest as that of President Hoover in the light of the fact that he is the only one who now has, through his experiences in grappling with these identical problems for the past three years, a knowledge of its intricacies that is possessed by no other human being.

The reason why Governor Small and the state Republican candidates should be elected is because they are the type of men who will help, rather than harrass President Hoover in the solution of these knotty problems. Instead of casting, as the Democrats have done, and are now continuing to cast, every obstacle in his way for unpatriotic political purposes and to prevent him, if possible, in attaining his ideals and ambitions for the American people. Every candidate on the Republican state ticket has known qualifications for the respective office which he seeks and is therefore entitled to the support of every Republican voter in the confines of Illinois.

Better Breakfasts

"LET us be gay" is the best sort of motto for the breakfast table. This is a meal at which cheerfulness is really an asset.

If the morning sun comes into your dining room, encourage it by lifting the blinds to its golden splendor. If the room faces north or west, perhaps you can find a sunny corner elsewhere in which to set the breakfast table—a bridge table will do nicely, if the family is small, and it is fun to make of the first meal of the day a movable feast.

Field Flower China

Use your gayest china, something with field flowers on it, or bright plates and cups in a variety of tones—should it not be of egg-shell thinness, it matters not at all for this informal meal.

As for food, give them a Better Breakfast. Here is a menu which will add perceptibly to the gaiety of even the gayest spring morning.

Strawberries and Cream Cold Cereal Scrambled Eggs and Hominy Peach Jam Toast Coffee

Scrambled Eggs and Hominy: Fry four slices bacon crisp, remove from skillet. Drain one-half No. 3 can hominy, add to hot fat, sauté a delicate brown. Beat four eggs slightly and add to hominy, cook gently until eggs are done. Season to taste. Add bacon broken up, or lay slices on top. About one-fourth cup grated cheese may be sprinkled over top. Serves four.

The statue is at the Carnation Milk Farms near Seattle, where both cows won their fame. Boy Scout Carlyle and Campfire girl Phyllis Reed are the wonder-cow's honor guard.

IN THE SWIM!—Lilyan Tashman illustrates the last word in beach costumes—a backless, skirtless suit with a little knit cap in contrasting colors. Notice the row of bright wooden bracelets matching the cap.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY SEES RADIO TELEPHONE SERVICE EXTENDED NEARLY AROUND THE WORLD When transatlantic radio telephone service was first opened to the public, on January 7, 1927, the service was limited to telephones in New York City and vicinity and those in London. A little less than five years later, on December 23, 1931, Governor Lawrence M. Judd, seated in the throne room of the former royal palace in Honolulu, and Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, in his office in Washington, D. C., spoke together to inaugurate telephone service between the Hawaiian Islands and the North American mainland, and thus brought one more island group within voice range of this continent. The map above shows how, in the intervening time, radio telephone service has extended almost around the globe. Telephone users of this country are within voice reach of nearly 23,000,000 telephones on five continents.

SPECIAL TERMS ON THOR WASHERS FOR LIMITED TIME

A down payment of only $2.50 will put one of these new Thor electric washers in your home—at once. You can pay the balance "Little by Little"—only $4.10 a month. (Cash price is $69.50.) A big week's washing costs little more than $1—even while you are still paying for the machine. What a saving! And it's wonderfully easy to wash with a Thor. Agitator action rubs clothes clean, gently but firmly, without preliminary soaking. Your hands hardly touch the hot sudsy water. A Lovell wringer gets clothes ready for the line. Let us demonstrate how you can do an average week's washing in two short hours.

ALSO SPECIAL TERMS ON CONLON AND THOR IRONERS

If your ironing now takes six hours, you can cut it down to two hours—and sit down while you're doing it. Automatic ironers do a remarkable job of ironing—better than most people can do by hand—with shirts and fussy pieces as well as flat things. For a limited time you can buy either the Conlon ironer (pictured) or the Thor Ironer (same type) for only $2.50 down—only $4.10 a month. (Cash price on both models is $69.50.) D. H. I. A. Has Done Much For Dairy Farmers

(By County News Service)
Giving up Dairy Herd Improvement Association work has never been seriously considered by most of the association members, L. W. Braham, Will county farm advisor said this week in discussing that project.

"These members know what D. H. I. A., work has done for them and that they cannot afford to relax in their efforts to lower costs and improve the efficiency of their herds even though the dairy income has been greatly reduced. They felt that their efficiency agent is more important than ever before. They are not interested in saving association dues by not testing and losing several times that amount by 'letting down' and through lowered efficiency," Mr. Braham said.

"A few association members who, for the most part, have not made the fullest use of the records and other helpful information made available through association work have, in their desire to cut expenses, decided to quit testing. The average Illinois farmer milking cows, also apparently feels that when the price of milk is low he can't afford to test and when the price is up he doesn't have to worry about the costs. The following facts might well be considered before any decision is made to test or not to test.

"The average cow in Dairy Herd Improvement associations in Illinois last year made $88.25 above feed costs. The average cow in the state made about $32 above the cost of feed. These comparative figures indicate the economic advantage of the D. H. I. A. member over the average dairyman in the state.

"Two hundred and seven D. H. I. A. members said, on the average that the work had a yearly value of $195.65 to them. This is a return of 276.25 per cent on the money invested."

Hollywood Hostess

KAY FRANCIS gives many state-ly formal parties, but her most notable ones are impromptu. She has one of the best stocked cupboards in Hollywood and her supply of assorted crackers and cookies is notable. When she suggests her country rarebit, her friends surge into the kitchen to see her make it. While stirring a table-spoonful of flour in the same quantity of melted butter, she slowly adds three-quarters of a cup of milk and cooks it for two minutes, before putting in a half pound of soft, mild cheese, cut in small pieces. Seasoning with salt, cayenne pepper, and a dash of mustard, she continues to stir until the cheese is fully melted. It is served on butter wafers or flake soda crackers. The dish is famous in the film colony.

Why You Should Vote "Yes" on the State Bond Issue

In putting thru the $20,000,000 bond issue proposition for submission to the voters at the November election, the Chicago committee caused the proposition to be so worded that all persons opposed to higher taxes and opposed to voting obligations against the state, will if uninformed, vote contrary to their wishes. Such persons would naturally vote "no" on the proposed bond issue. If they do make a cross in the square opposite "no," they, in effect, vote "Yes." They not only vote for the $20,000,000 obligation but they vote to pay the entire amount in one installment in next year's taxes, thereby practically doubling the state taxes next year.

If they vote "yes," they vote against making the bonds an obligation against the property of the state and they also vote against paying the bonds thru taxes. If they vote "yes," they vote that the counties which received the relief money shall themselves pay off the bonds from their share of the state gasoline tax money. If they vote "yes" and the bond issue carries, Chicago will be required to pay over 90 per cent of the bonds from its share of the gas tax money. Forty-seven counties downstate will pay the remainder out of their share of the state gas tax money while 54 counties which did not use the relief funds will have no payments to make from any source, either taxes or gasoline tax money. Therefore it is important that every person should vote "Yes" on the bond issue little ballot. To do so make a mark in the square opposite "Yes."

In the history of the state up to this time every bond issue submitted to the people has been for obtaining funds thru an obligation placed up on the real and personal property of the state, payable, principal and interest from taxes. Up to this time every person voting for a bond issue has voted for more obligations and more taxes. This year, for the first time, a voter in voting for a bond issue, votes against additional obligations and against increased taxes. For the first time in voting "no," the voter votes for the obligation and for the tax boost.

The bond issue proposition was worded in such a way as to "hook" the farmers and business men who keenly feel the effects of the depression and who, if uninformed, will vote against their own interests when they go to the polls. The ballot has been so arranged that persons who are opposed to higher taxes and more obligations will, when voting against the bond issue, vote to nearly double next year's taxes. Secretary of State William J. Stratton, in an official document sent to each county clerk in the state, explains the operation of the tax proposition and states that in case the bond issue fails to pass, a property tax will be spread next year. He says:

"This property tax will require at least 30 cents on each $100 assessed valuation," which will practically double the present state tax rate and will be spread over the entire state. If the bond issue is approved, there will be no property tax required to retire the anticipation notes issued to obtain money for unemployment relief. The anticipation notes will be paid with the proceeds of the bonds and the bonds will be paid from the counties share of motor fuel tax. Each county will pay only in the proportion it shared in the relief funds. No deduction will be made from the share of the county which did not receive these funds."

Vote "yes" on the $20,000,000 bond proposition. You therefore, vote against doubling the state tax. If you vote "no" you vote for increased taxes. If you do not vote at all, your action is equivalent to voting "no" if you vote for members of the General Assembly. The bond issue, to carry, must receive a majority of all persons voting for members of the General Assembly.

She Had a Reason

A farm wife living near Bainbridge usually drives to town in her car. One day she had to look after some business at the lumber yard and on this occasion she hitched the nag to the buggy and drove to town.

The attendant at the lumber yard noticed the change from the car to the buggy and asked:

"How does it happen you're driving the old nag today?"

The farm wife replied:

"I have to drive the nag because I haven't the jack to plunk down to buy juice to run the old bus."—Exchange.

Errors

The little I have seen of the world teaches me to look upon the errors of others in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the history of one poor heart that has sinned and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it has passed through, the brief pulsation of joy, the feverish inquietude of hope and fear, the pressure of want, the desertion of friends, I would fain leave the erring soul of my fellow man with him from whose hand it came.—Longfellow.

Old Piralical Haunt

St. Thomas was once the home of two great pirate chiefs. One was called Blackbeard, because his beard was so black. And the other was Bluebeard, because his beard was blacker than black. Blackbeard's castle still dominates the harbor of St. Thomas, and could be bought for the proverbial song. It is a tower of crumbling stone, haunted, they say, with the ghosts of pirates bold and their lights of love.

Fable of Freddie and the Bow-Wows

By GEORGE ADE

(© Bell Syndicate.)—WNU Service

ONCE upon a Time there was a Modern Product named Freddie. He had been seeing Life in all of its Phases—the Sunshine and the Storm, the Smiles and the Tears, the Tranquility of Peace and the Scourges of War—ever since the Year of his Birth, 1915, so that in 1932 he was permitted to look back over a varied Career of 17 Years, checking up the miraculous Changes which had been wrought by the Introduction of the Oxford Bags, the Dance known as the Charleston and Chocolate-covered Ice Cream, to say nothing of noting with Regret the Appearance of many Influences which threatened to disintegrate Civilization.

It was Last Year that Freddie began to shave and become Misanthropic. Perhaps he had quaffed too freely from the Golden Bowl of Pleasure. More than likely he had, even as many another Man of the World, become surfeited with artificial Pleasures and was beginning to discover the Hallowiness of the whole Ball of Wax.

Having run the Gamut of Pleasure and followed every Primrose Path leading to a Movie Show or a Candy Store, it is no Wonder that he became sated with Empty Enjoyments and was disposed to adopt a Cynical Attitude.

If the lifted Eye-Brow and the cold Smile lurking at one Corner of the Mouth, when the Subject of Woman was brought up, seemed subtle Indications that he held Pessimistic Views in regard to the much-discussed Sex, it must be remembered that he had drunk the Pleasures of a Dancing Academy to the very Dregs and had Whiled away the Hours with every Type of Vamp under the High School Age.

Before blaming Freddie for being so Bloozy, one should charitably consider that he was a Man who, in taking his Fling, had been played upon by the Fates and had endured and suffered.

Not long ago he crawled out one Morning and sat on the edge of the Pad, brooding over the Decadence of the whole Social Organization. There had been many Changes since the remote and glorious Days of 1930 and Freddie, surveying them in the cold Light of Experience was compelled to admit that doggone Few of them had been to the Good.

Jewelry Strictly Banned.

For instance, there was his Shirt. Why hadn't some one taken some Action or done something in regard to Shirts in general? The Prince of Wales had made it practically impossible for any Fellow who was up to Snuff and a real Dinger to wear anything except a Blue Shirt with Soft Collar attached. At first these Blues had been O. K. Full of Snap, Peppy, you understand. They looked Great in conjunction with any kind of College Diagonal or Knitted Effect in the Cravat Line. Regular old Yale and Harvard Stuff.

Then, when the Prince had every Hot Dog in the World sporting a Robin's Egg Blue with a discouraged Collar, what does he do but pull out for Matabeleland, Rhodesia and the Argentine, leaving all the Chaps flat? They had waited Week after Week for a Genius to rise up and reveal some such Inspiration as an up-and-down striped Collar keeping Company with a clay-colored Shirt and a Butterfly Bow of rich gangrenous Shade, but evidently no Sartorial Hero had the Courage to dispute a Supreme Authority. No wonder Freddie had to sigh deeply as he sized up the hateful Garment, which was made of the material used in lining Suit Cases.

After that he permitted himself to give way to melancholy Reflections on the Matter of Stick Pins. He knew that he could not wear one without becoming a Social Pariah but he asked himself why these pleasing little Ornaments had been taken away from the Man of Fashion. He had some approximate Pearls and a ruby-red Set with Twinklers and often he longed to flash them on the World and make it a happier Place of Residence, but he had the Dope on what Men are wearing this Year and he had studied all of the Sock and Clothing Ads and he knew that America's Junior Aristocracy must ever carry a Pained Expression but avoid Jewelry.

Within a Few Minutes he was visited by another great Sorrow. Schooled, as he was, by Contact with a Hard World, he forgot himself for the Moment and almost made a Display of Temper. It was while he was applying the Goo which was supposed to lay the Hair straight Back, the same as on a Bird Dog, and give it the gloss of Patent Leather.

"I wish to the Dickens," he exclaimed, "that some one would get up a Gleamola that would do the Work!"

Before him, stark and threatening, loomed the Ordeal of Breakfast. Would it be Melon or Grapefruit and, in either Case, what Assurance did he have that it would be served cold and ripe?

On the Morning of the Day which held so much Tribulation for Our Hero, the Toast was too thick and scorched on one side and the Coffee had a funny Taste. The Pioneers who came out and built the Log Cabins did not suffer all the Hardships. We'll tell the bleeding World!

A Tough Existence.

It was during Freddie's Run-In with unsatisfactory Food and slow Service that he made certain caustic References to Modern Journalism. He said the Papers were getting punk. This candid Criticism was evoked by the Fact that he could not find under "Social Happenings" any Reference to the slick Party he had attended the Night before.

Just when he was beginning to edge out into the Sunshine he ran plump into a Cloud of Gloom and was in the Depths once more. It seemed that the Bonehead at the Garage had failed to fill the Car. If Freddie chafed under the Delay and spoke sharply to the Menial, it must be taken into Consideration that he had trained his Relatives to anticipate his wishes, consequently it irked him to be stood up like a Wet Umbrella. Especially when the Cigarettes didn't seem right. Not enough imported Tobacco in them. Life was turning out to be a bitter Experiment but he tried to bear up.

Of course, he was ashamed to drive past Gertrude's House in a Last Year's Car. Why, he asked, had he been cursed with a Dad who was not only Tight but also Tyrannical? What was the Big Idea of all this Mooching about getting Home by 2 a. m.?

As he loafed along the Country Lane, accompanied by a hardened Roue who would be 19 in January, he was doing barely 55 miles an Hour, when a Constable with Bad Manners flagged him and slipped him a Summons. He wondered if Conditions were any worse in Soviet Russia.

While he was at Luncheon he said he could remember the Times when Pie a La Mode was dandy.

The new Release at the Picture House was the same old Junk. He said they had a lot of Muttis out in Hollywood.

He walked out of the Dancing Dump after a fretful Two Hours, because the Jazz was all over Three Weeks Old.

His Parents couldn't get a Word out of him at Dinner. They had green Olives on the Table, knowing all the Time that he preferred Ripe ones, stuffed. It began to look like a Conspiracy.

At the Party that Evening he had to admit, in the Presence of several care-worn Veterans attending the Prep School, that Girls were not nearly as Nifty as they were away back in 1929.

Bermudians Will Buy

Portrait of Founder

The Bermuda Historical society has entered into negotiations for the purchase of the portrait of the founder of the Bermuda colony, Sir George Somers and his wife, now in a private collection in England, according to the Bermudian, the pictorial magazine of Bermuda. The islands were long known as the Somers Islands, partly in his honor and partly in description of the climate, while the first capital of the Bermudas, St. George's, preserves his Christian name and commemorates the patron saints of England.

Sir George Somers was one of the Elizabethan sea-dogs who made England's name feared on the seas at the close of the Sixteenth century. He made three voyages to the West Indies, on the third of which, en route to the starving settlement in Virginia, he was shipwrecked on one of the coral reefs of Bermuda. Here he built two ships of the native cedar, and continued his voyage, but returned from Jamestown later in the same year for provisions. He died of a fever in Bermuda soon after his second landing on the islands, but his companions continued to England. It was probably from one of the sailors of this vessel that Shakespeare heard descriptions of the islands which he made the setting of "The Tempest."

Fiddler Crab's Fiddling

Except as bait for the fisherman, there is no known excuse for the existence of the fiddler crab, which abounds in the mud flats of the south Atlantic coast. He frequents the deserted portions of beaches, and colonizes under the barnacled wharves, drilling the wet sands with thousands of tiny twisting tunnels. At the mouth of his home he stands, poised, tense. And all of a sudden, for no apparent reason, the ungainly claw moves jerkily up and down. It at once becomes apparent why he is known as a fiddler. It is as if he were drawing an unseen bow across an invisible violin. Whatever it is that is responsible for the fiddling activities seems to influence all the crabs in the vicinity, and it would seem as if they were part of one great orchestra. Some of the shore natives insist that this is an exchange of signals among them.

Youthful Statesmen

William Pitt was premier of England when he was only twenty-four and Charles James Fox was recognized as the greatest debater in parliament when he was about the same age, having made his entrance in that body at the age of nineteen.

John Young Brown of Kentucky was elected to congress when he was twenty-four, and too young to take his seat under the provisions of the Constitution. He was elected to the Thirty-sixth congress, but couldn't take his seat until the second session. This same Brown was again elected to the Fortieth congress, but his seat was declared vacant on account of a disloyal act. Again he was elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth congresses and later was governor of Kentucky.

PROBLEMS OF THE MODERN HOME

Joshua 24:14, 15; Mark 10:2-12; Ephesians 6:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve: whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Pleasing God in My Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rules to Live By at Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—My Home Problems.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Problems of the Modern Home.

I. A United Home to Serve the Lord (Josh. 24:14, 15).

Joshua had succeeded Moses as Israel's leader. He was conscious of his being taken away soon in death from the people (Josh. 23:1), and of their liability to lapse into idolatry. He reviewed before them the history of God's goodness to them, and appealed to them for a rational consideration of their responsibility, and the exercise of sober judgment (v. 14). He wanted their choices of God as over against the false gods to be a balanced judgment. He followed this appeal with his own example (v. 15). He told them that his mind was already made up. He associated his household with himself. His decision was not a hasty one. It had been talked over at home, therefore, he uttered the united sentiment of his family.

II. The Father and Mother in the Home (Mark 10:2-12).

God constituted the race male and female. His purpose was that they should be united for life in holy wedlock, with love as the bond of union between them.

1. Marriage should not be degraded by divorce (vv. 2-5). God ordained the marriage relation, and intended it to be indissoluble. God, through Moses, suffered, limited, and regulated divorce, because of the hardness of the hearts of the people.

2. Marriage is God's primal law (vv. 6-8). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proven by the fundamental fact of sex, "God made them male and female" (v. 6).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9). God declared to Adam that man should leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife.

4. Marriage of the divorcer forbidden (vv. 4-12). The marriage relation should be broken only by death, or by sin. The party responsible for divorce, who marries again, is guilty of adultery.

III. Members of the Household (Eph. 6:1-9).

In the home are found father, mother, children, and sometimes servants. Each member has rights and privileges which must be respected.

1. Children (vv. 1-3).

a. They should obey their parents (v. 1). The ground for this obedience is the fact that the parents stand in the place of God with the children.

b. The children should honor their parents (v. 2). Obedience to parents is limited to the period of immaturity. When children take their place in the establishing of new units in society, they are no longer under obligation to obey their parents. Honor means to have in reverence.

2. Parents (v. 4). Doubtless the word "fathers" is intended to be inclusive of the mothers.

a. Provoke not your children to wrath. Parents should not irritate or aggravate their children.

b. To bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Nurture doubtless means to educate, and admonition to discipline.

3. Servants and masters (vv. 5-9).

a. Servants are to obey their masters (vv. 5-8). This obedience should be (1) Servants should have proper respect for their masters, and an earnest desire to please them. (2) Servants should perform their tasks as though they were doing them for Christ's sake. (3) The servant's aim should not be merely to please the eyes of the master, but to render honest and acceptable service. (4) With good will. It should not be primarily for approval or praise. Christian servants will perform their duties to their masters with the same fidelity as they would unto Christ. (5) Rewarded by the Lord (v. 8). The Lord takes account of our service in the common ways of life, and will some day reward us accordingly.

b. Masters to be considerate (v. 9). Just as servants are to give wholehearted consideration for their masters, so masters are to look after the best interests of their servants.

Go With God

God is always ready to go before us. Indeed, we never can go anywhere victoriously unless he does lead us. To go without him into any of life's experience—struggles, dangers, or duties—is to fail.

Reveals Character

Did we get everything we craved for in the hour of asking it, I think it would be a long farewell to manhood. Work reveals character, but so does waiting.—George H. Morrison.

Bacillus of Tetanus

During the World war the well cultivated fields in the north of France were found to teem with the bacillus of tetanus, whose ravages among the wounded would have been appallingly heavy but for the timely use of that antoxin which was available, thanks to the researches of Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato many years earlier. The story of Kitasato, a pioneer of medicine and a microbe hunter, is told by Dr. Claude Lillingston in Hygeia Magazine.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Clashes Mark Tax League Quizz

By County News Service
Clashes in which Probate Clerk Frank Wheeler and County Auditor Thomas K. Sprague participated with Homer Grommon, president of the Will County Taxpayers' League, and charges that the league was continuing its investigation to provide political ammunition, enlivened sessions of the conference between committees representing the league and the board of supervisors, Monday.

At the end of the day's session, John P. Conrad, Monee supervisor, stated that in his opinion continuation of the conferences called for the purpose of considering reductions in county expenditures, would only furnish material for political propaganda unless an opinion is first obtained from the state's attorney to the effect that the appropriation bill, passed in September, may be legally reconsidered.

"I introduced and fought for a motion to reduce salaries 20 per cent," Mr. Conrad said. "I was defeated and I know when I am licked. I hold no animosity toward members of the board who did not vote as I did. If I had represented a Joliet district I would have voted as the people of that district wished. I was with the minority and now it seems that we should submit to the wishes of the majority."

At the morning session County Auditor Sprague charged that Mr. Grommon was playing politics in conducting the investigation on the eve of the November 8 election.

"If this investigation is not being conducted for political purposes, why doesn't your committee cease its activities until after the election?" Sprague asked Grommon.

"The taxpayers' league has been in existence for a year and four months," Grommon answered. "During that time we have made several requests for reductions and have not obtained satisfaction. We will continue our fight until some real economies are obtained."

At the afternoon session Grommon and Probate Clerk Wheeler clashed when the former requested a list of the employees of his office and the amount each is being paid.

"You won't get them," Wheeler shot back. "I report only to the county board; they're my boss. I told you last spring I wouldn't furnish such information. You don't want to find out what's right, you just want something to find fault with."

Mr. Wheeler, however, furnished information requested regarding expenditures and receipts of his office without naming the individuals employed there.

County Judge Ralph C. Austin told the group that he was willing to co-operate with the committee to reduce expenditures but that he did not feel that he could conduct the affairs of his office without a stenographer. The taxpayers' committee had recommended that the services of the stenographer who is paid $1,350 a year, be eliminated entirely.

Triangle Talkies

Hey, hey, everybody!
We had a special business meeting for basketball last Monday evening and believe it or not, the heavies are going to buy new suits I think it was a great suggestion, don't you folks think so?

Oh yes, and did you hear that Lyle is going to coach the girls again this year? And are they tickled.

The club is anticipating a play to be given sometime in December. So watch for more particulars on it in each week's news.

Ernie has given several people a "break" and written to them. She says she likes her job very much, and will be home to see us all in about two weeks.

Basketball is the main topic of discussion right now and the club announces an open try out for all heavies, lights and girls whether ye be club members or not, on the first Tuesday night in November at 7:45 in the gym. Everybody has a chance to make one of the three teams so don't forget, keep that date open.

Our Halloween party on Oct. 31 sounds like a "depression" party. Admission will be very reasonable and you may all dress in old clothes. So folks what more do you want? No one really ought to find it necessary to refuse to buy a ticket.

So until next week, I'll say O. K. Tinley Park.

Iced Coffee! Umm!

ICED coffee makes a fine summer drink, providing you start with the right sort of coffee. That means coffee that has been carefully handled and exposed to the air as little as possible, because coffee is volatile, and its aroma is part of its taste. And that is why vacuum-packed coffee which comes in air-tight cans makes the very best brew.

Coffee Combinations

But just plain coffee, iced or hot, is by no means the only beverage which can be made from this fragrant bean. Here are two recipes for cooling summer drinks in which coffee is one of the chief ingredients.

Iced Orange Coffee: Wash two oranges and pare off a thin paring of the outer skin, being careful to get none of the white. Boil one-half cup sugar, one cup water and the orange skin together for ten minutes. Cool, strain, and add four cups cold coffee. Just before serving, add the juice from oranges and one-half cup evaporated milk, and pour in tall glasses partly filled with crushed ice.

Coffee Punch: Mix together one cup strong coffee, one cup orange juice, the juice from two No. 2 cans grapefruit and one cup maple syrup, and chill. Just before serving, add one quart ginger ale, and two cups heavy cream, if desired. The cream may be omitted. This makes not quite three quarts.*
